This mosaic represents a famous scene in Greek and Roman mythology: The crowning of the god Apollo after his defeat of the satyr Marsyas in a musical contest. Apollo, seated on the right, is crowned by the goddess of victory, Nike. The lyre, a harp-like instrument, that he played upside down to win, is by his side. The two women who stand behind him are muses of the arts who judged the contest. The tree behind Apollo flourishes with green leaves, symbolizing his victory.

Marsyas, standing in the center, looks miserable and defeated, his double flute broken, a part in his hand and a part thrown to the ground by his feet. His companion, the young Olympus, wearing Eastern dress and cap, mourns his friend's loss.

Dionysus, god of wine, seated on the left rests his head on one hand and weeps for Marsyas. Dionysus wears a crown of grapes and ivy. An old satyr holds his thyrsus, a long ribboned staff. The goddess of wisdom, Athena, wearing a helmet, stands behind Dionysus. It was she who invented the flute. The tree behind the defeated group stands leafless and dying, a symbol of Marsyas' soon terrible fate, to be skinned alive.

This reference guide is just the tip of the iceberg on helpful resources in the library’s holdings. Many of the suggested resources above have their own bibliographies. Each of these may lead you to other resources that would also be helpful in your research here in the museum or in another library. To find additional resources, use keywords such as “mosaic” and “Roman decoration” in the on-line catalog and periodical indexes. Once you find a few relevant titles, pay attention to the subject headings to identify similar materials. Examples of useful subject headings are:

- Mosaics, Roman
- Mosaics, Hellenistic
- Mythology, Greek, in art
- Rome—Social life and customs

For guidelines about writing it may be helpful to look at Sylvan Barnet’s A Short Guide to Writing about Art, which includes tips for looking, reading, and writing about art.
